Cerebrospinal fluid (CSF) was obtained from 9 patients with acute MS and 10 patients with other neurological disorders, by lumbar puncture and analyzed for the presence of proteins, total IgG and IgG antibody to measles virus. CSF pleocytosis was a feature common to both groups, but CSF total protein, albumin and IgG was significantly elevated in MS patients. A significant increase in IgG antibody to measles virus was found in MS patients and in most patients in whom MS or other disorders could not be excluded, this increase providing the only positive test. CSF IgG antibody to herpes simplex virus was elevated in 5 MS patients and in one patient in whom MS was considered, but not excluded, raising the possibility that infection with herpes simplex virus may be a factor in MS. CSF IgG antibody to cytomegalovirus was raised in 4 of 9 MS patients and 4 of 10 patients in whom MS could not be excluded. The significance of these findings is discussed.Q: PHP switch case not inserting into database I have written code to insert data into my database but it is not going through the switch case, instead it is going to default even when the case is matched.
