Q: Uncaught TypeError: Cannot read property'setAttribute' of null even though document.body is not null I've been working on a project with a friend and he asked me to help him debug what looked like a bad access error. In my webpack bundle, I see this error: The error lies inside a method of a custom Element (I think this is the class of my webpack bundle's div, check the code below). I can't find anything that relates to this on google, and I'm fairly new to webpack, so I'm not sure what it is or where the problem is. Relevant code import { createElement, cloneElement } from 'lodash'; class ThisClassIsCustomElement { constructor(...) { this.element = document.createElement('div'); this.element.setAttribute('class', 'element-class'); ... Webpack bundle (rest of file's relevant parts removed) import React, { Fragment, useState, useRef } from'react'; const OutermostClass = styled.div` flex: 1; margin: 40px; padding: 40px; background-color: green; border: 1px solid black; color: white; font-weight: bold; font-size: 15px; `; const Board = () => { const [zoom, setZoom] = useState(1); const [isPlaying, setIsPlaying] = useState(false); function ZoomOut() { setZoom(zoom === 5? 1 : 5); } return (

Prevalence of psychiatric illness among a rural-urban migrant population in Malaysia. The prevalence of psychiatric disorders among migrant workers has been a topic of interest in psychiatric epidemiological research. However, most of the published studies have been conducted in migrant population who are predominantly from the industrialised countries and the results have been inconsistent. To investigate the prevalence of psychiatric disorders among rural-urban migrants in Malaysia. A cross-sectional study was conducted among migrant workers who came from rural areas of the state of Johor, Malaysia, to the urban area of the state of Kedah. Participants were interviewed to obtain information on demographic data and the presence of psychiatric disorders using the Mini International Neuropsychiatric Interview. A total of 355 migrant workers, comprising 205 men and 150 women, were recruited. The female migrant workers had higher level of education, higher body mass index (BMI) and were from rural areas. This was also reflected on the higher prevalence of overweight/obesity (32.7% vs. 23.3%) and higher prevalence of psychiatric disorders. Statistically significant association was found between gender and the presence of any psychiatric disorder, major depression, substance abuse and phobia, but no significant association was found between the type of migrant category and the prevalence of psychiatric disorders. This study highlights the high prevalence of psychiatric disorders among migrant workers. This is a vulnerable group of the population, who is often isolated from family support and adequate medical care. Early identification of psychiatric disorders and intervention is important in reducing the disease burden and its associated disability and mortality.IN THE PAST month, oil prices have fallen from $100 a barrel to $75. Oil prices are now lower than they were last summer. This is good news, since, at that time, the price of oil had been above $100 for more than three years. In the previous bubble, prices were too high for too long. Investors looked for more risk and bigger profits. In the latest boom, investors sought safety and profits were too low for too long. Both the previous and the latest cycle had one common characteristic: a big decline in the ratio of reserves (or oil in the ground) to consumption (or demand). In the previous boom, oil demand was growing but the increase was partly offset by declining production (see chart). In the current boom, oil prices have declined, meaning oil is cheap relative to other goods, so demand is likely to increase. But the current oil boom owes more to the fall in the price of oil than to a rebound
