You can also see that the key has the added resource name below the license key. This is something you can add. As you can see the key file name is copied verbatim in the event of a mis-entered key. What you can not see is the Version: 7500. If the Version matches the Service Pack being downloaded your activation will be successful. In the above example the key file is titled .txt Hope this helps! The hard end of a car mechanic: This software is designed to identify legitimate Windows 7 service packs. The software will locate the service pack code then search the file system for the original code it was created from. The service pack code will then be compared against the code from the original key. If the service pack code changes (as each windows service pack has an unique Windows 7 code) then the software will block any attempts to activate the service pack.
