Actress Selena Gomez is playing the mother of a young transgender girl, whose parents are terrified of the first-time experience of transitioning at age 11, and want to put her through the process as soon as possible. People, the NBC sitcom, is centered around Aimee, who is played by “Modern Family” alumna Julie Bowen, and is being described as a new kind of coming-of-age story. In the midst of her childhood, Aimee is diagnosed with gender dysphoria, undergoes a sex reassignment procedure and becomes a young woman, the playbill says. The play was produced last year at the Sundance Theatre Lab in Los Angeles. It is being sold now by The Rubypark Group, which describes itself as one of the most important providers of educational and theatrical experiences in the United States. The cast includes Houston-born singer-actor Arian Moayed, as well as Bowen, Ed Begley Jr. and Katie Finneran. “I knew that I wanted to be a part of a production that would touch people, and that Selena’s love of children, her great experience and where she is in her career made her an ideal choice,” Bowen told NBC’s “Today” on Wednesday, adding the production is “a gorgeous role for me.” She is especially looking forward to working with Gomez, who impressed last year at Sundance with her performance in “Monte Carlo” — set in the world of American beauty pageants. “It’s going to be great,” said Bowen, the mother of two children. “She’s a superstar.” The play “People,” co-written by Bowen and choreographer Ryan Heffington, will be showing a preview in July and then off-Broadway in September, with the official opening on Aug. 10. If you’re looking for a new type of off-Broadway show, look no further. 09e8f5149f
