Bank robbers try to get away with $92,000 Police are hunting for two young men who tried to rob a bank, stealing $92,000 before being discovered in a case of mistaken identity at the U.S. Bank in Merrimack. Police said two men entered the bank at 424 Main St. about 12:55 p.m. on Monday. One man, wearing black clothing and a hooded sweatshirt, walked through the lobby and entered a teller line. The man tried to make a $2,000 deposit but the teller refused to work with him, police said. The robber then left the bank and tried to enter a Chase Bank but was denied entry. Police said the man went outside and was talking on his cell phone when he was recognized by a person inside the bank. The suspect exited the bank and walked over to a white Pontiac Grand Am that had a license plate from Massachusetts. He got in the car and drove away. The person inside the bank ran after the suspect, who drove away. A passenger was in the white Grand Am, police said. It was one of the two men who tried to rob the bank, but officers weren't able to get a good description of him. Police said the man in the bank was able to get a good look at the suspect and the getaway car. Police said he's described as a white man in his 20s with long hair and a beard, wearing a black hooded sweatshirt and jeans. Police have not revealed a motive for the robbery, though they said it was likely random. "I don't think anyone should pull off a bank job if they know they're not going to get away with it," Merrimack Police Chief Bill Hawley told the Boston Globe. "I don't think anybody should pull off a 3da54e8ca3
