This year's fall season looks set to be dominated by big budget science fiction films, with the likes of Star Wars: The Last Jedi (which is due to be released on May 4, 2017), Independence Day: Resurgence (which is due to be released on August 24, 2017), Star Wars Episode VIII (which is due to be released on December 17, 2017), Alien: Covenant (which is due to be released on May 19, 2018), Mission: Impossible – Fallout (which is due to be released on August 31, 2018), and Star Wars: The Force Awakens (which is due to be released on December 18, 2017) all due to debut. The Last Jedi, the culmination of the current series in the Star Wars franchise, is expected to be an insta-classic. James Gunn directed and wrote the screenplay for the latest installment, and he's in the running for the Academy Award for Best Original Screenplay. Regardless of how you feel about the film, there is one aspect of it that can't be denied – the film looks incredible. Director, composer, and sound designer Ben Burtt has been nominated for the Academy Award for his work on the film's sound design. Photo courtesy StarWars.com. 20190517131845 by Daniel Annen. Edit.
