Sockso is a Windows Freeware that will add your contacts to your iPod or iPhone contact list, automatically. It will also download/sync contacts on all your computers and allow you to use them on any of them. In addition, it will organize and group your contacts into specific groups or "Sockets", based on their common characteristics (such as friend, home, work, etc). Sockso has a neat user interface, is easy to use, can be found in the Accessories folder and is totally free. When you launch Sockso, you will see two windows. The first one is the Sockso main window. It contains a drop-down list that allows you to select the "Sockets" you wish to create. Click on the "Create Sockets..." button and the main window will expand to a third window. This window allows you to enter specific data regarding the new Sockets. The most important information for the Sockets (name, description, contact info...) is automatically generated, but you can add these fields manually. When you're ready, click the "Add Sockets" button to save your Sockets. You can now launch Sockso on any of your devices (PC, iPhone, iPod). In order to do that, go to the main window, click on the "Sync Sockets" button and choose your device. In addition, you can also select the "Download Sockets to Device" option to have your Sockets automatically synchronized to the selected device. Now, every time you add a contact to your device, the contact will be added to your Sockets. You can now select one of your Sockets to be the default and then select the "Show Sockets on Device" option, which will enable you to see your Sockets on your device. Sockso has a simple and straightforward user interface. Some minor parts of the program may be improved (e.g. the "Add Sockets" button doesn't have an icon, you can't resize the main window...). But it's good that everything else is free and that it's small and light. Sockso is a must-have software for all contacts-oriented iPhone users!
