to whatever has been deemed most "dangerous"), and on the bus ride to and from work every morning. I've had the most luck with codeine at first (unprescribed) and then switching over to Tylenol 3 (prescribed). The codeine works against the pain, as does the tylenol. I was on the "milk" and honestly don't think my problems are caused by dairy products. I'd bet that the more opioids you take, the less tolerant you become and the worse the side effects are. I'm pretty sure this is the case and I'm not sure why anyone would take heroin when there are so many harmful drugs available. I've been on pain meds for two years. I take a bit of vicodin, benadryl and flexeril each day. I have been on oxycodone, fentanyl patches and methadone too. I think it will be methadone that I go back to. I feel the most relief on taking methadone and I do not have as many side effects from it. The few side effects I have are at the worst times and they are kind of annoying (sleeplessness, dizziness) but then again, I was previously on cocaine and used quite a few other drugs and I had only a moderate tolerance and I never got as sleepy as I do from the methadone. I recently had a prescription for suboxone however, because I also have a problem with the cravings for drugs. I haven't tried the suboxone yet, but I am hoping it will take the cravings away. I agree with you that I will probably be taking the suboxone again, and I have to be careful not to get the methadone habit again. It is very hard to break that addiction. I am glad that I found this forum, it is great to have support from fellow heroin users. I'm going to be honest. I can't help with much. I've been clean for about 2 1/2 years. I quit around January of 2008. I didn't take as much heroin as you did but I did a few trips (1 -2). And, I have severe neuropathy in my feet which makes it impossible to walk. I do have hypothyroidism too, though. For a
