Bones are mainly formed and remodeled by osteoblasts. The formation and remodeling of bone is affected by many factors, such as hormones and mechanical stress. Endothelium is closely associated with bone in the cardiovascular and skeletal system. Endothelium is known to respond to various stimuli, such as hormones and mechanical stress, and to regulate vascular tone and platelet aggregation. In the present review, we describe the effects of calcium-sensing receptor

(CaSR) on bone metabolism, and the interaction between bone metabolism and the cardiovascular system. 261 S.
