At the heart of Desktop+ is a window manager that allows you to view, work with and, where possible, use your desktop just as you normally would. While you may already be using desktop view modes in some games, Desktop+ brings all your desktop tools into VR, letting you use them from inside SteamVR itself. VRScope: VR Strapdown When you're in VR with a desktop surface, you can still use most of your desktop's tools like folders, file manager, etc. But since you can't see a desktop surface you might find your workflow slower than on your desktop. Desktop+ solves that problem by letting you use a virtual dashboard (like the Steam controller's Menu button) to link different windows to their apps or related features. The dashboard can be set up to show and hide in real time and show an arbitrary number of windows per row without breaking anything. Switching desktops takes just a couple of seconds and works independently from SteamVR. Front Row to the rescue Besides the dashboard, you can also share the desktop view of your SteamVR HMD to your 2nd or 3rd monitor. That way you don't have to fiddle with your desktop view to get it to work. It won't interfere with the HMD view that is active at the time.
