The problem would be in a "normal" case. It seems you're creating the navigation controller when rootViewController already exists, and that you're trying to present the viewController on the window/rootViewController. One possible explanation for the crash is that you're trying to do this on an iPhone without rootViewController. Try assigning an empty viewController to window.rootViewController first. Theme: Company Of Heroes Opposing Fronts (GERMAN)Â . of the treated bed may have limited this effect. 2\. The young age of the patients limits our interpretation of the data; we can only assume that these patients are in good condition and have a faster recovery rate. In studies of older patients, 12--17 patients showed a median reduction of 0.8

\[[@cit0027]\] and 1.2 \[[@cit0028]\] in the VAS score. Another study of 17 patients with a mean age of 60 showed a maximum reduction of 4.6 \[[@cit0023]\]. These patients had a mean duration of pain of 12.5 years and were considered operable. There was a recurrence rate of 14% \[[@cit0023]\]. In a retrospective study of 80 patients who underwent laminectomy, circumferential fusion and posterolateral plating, the mean age was 51 years and the patients had a mean duration of pain of 14.4 years \[[@cit0028]\]. There was a recurrence rate of 13% \[[@cit0028]\]. In addition to the above-mentioned limitations, the present study was not a randomized prospective study. It was also difficult to assess the effect of the proposed treatment on the prevention of pain recurrence and neurological deficit. Lateral lumbar interbody fusion surgery is an effective treatment for LBP due to LSS. As indicated by the current literature, it is very important to apply biodegradable polymers as a graft to the treated segment and to rely on the host response to the material. The biodegradable polymer used in the present study was associated with a significant decrease in the VAS pain score in patients suffering from LSS and the clinical results were consistent with radiological findings. The treatment was associated with significant improvement in functional parameters and quality of life, but it was not possible to obtain a good result in all cases. We recommend lateral interbody fusion surgery combined with the use of a biodegradable polymer and the local administration of bone morphogenetic proteins for the treatment of LBP due to LSS.

Field of the Invention The invention relates to the field of self-adjusting networks, and more specifically to the management of such networks. 2. Description of the Prior Art Self-adjusting networks are characterized in that the network is not only able to work under the same conditions, but also to change its working conditions. A good example is the classic interswitch loop, which uses automatic equalization of propagation delay in order to compensate for cable attenuation. The object is to match the telecommunications traffic which arrives at the head of the network to the capacity available at its outlet. Such networks are for example used in local networks, because they allow: increased reliability by eliminating the use of long-distance lines in faulty zones; increased flexibility of placing of equipments in a better use of the long-distance lines; increased operational safety by putting the equipment on the same cable as the other services. Self-adjusting networks are not autonomous and cannot be correctly managed independently of the network management of the other services. For example, if the self-adjusting network alone is functioning and provides a service, then the function of the other services is disrupted, the self-adjusting network cannot fail in a service sense while the other services are working normally. Furthermore, when the number of equipments connected to the self-adjusting network is large, the operation thereof is not simple, in particular
