Molecular cloning and functional expression of the gamma-aminobutyric acid transporters GAT-1 and GAT-3 in mouse B cells. gamma-Aminobutyric acid (GABA) is the major inhibitory neurotransmitter of the central nervous system and GABA-mediated signaling is implicated in controlling B cell activation. Recent evidence suggests that GABA acts directly on B cells through a number of GABA(A) receptor subunits. However, the molecular basis of the effects of GABA in B cell activation remains largely unknown. GABA transporters (GATs) are responsible for recycling GABA from the synaptic cleft. CurlMini is a graphic version of cURL, a CLI tool for seamlessly transferring data via different network protocols. Simply because the tool comes with a graphic interface, that does not automatically mean that users do not need to bother with knowing the commands. In fact, the commands required are the same. The GUI consists of a single window with a dedicated request box in the upper section where users can add the desired command. In the lower section, the interface features two boxes with the current and old result for the requests made. According to the developer, the tool comes with an ability to expand the text field for the command, a feature that may come in handy when checking for indents, line breaks or unnecessary spaces. Providing that none of the aforementioned are present in the command, the request should be executed fast and smooth. It is worth mentioning that the tool records all requests locally in a file dubbed requests.log, which can be found in the app's folder. At the same time, the program includes a request history button where everything is recorded so they can be reused. Bottom line is that all requests executed are automatically saved, thus simplifying cURL users work.
