

Entries were sorted by hit frequency. Randomized hits were considered to be those from users that hit the site. The top 24 hits were examined manually to verify that they were real. To avoid any false entries that could be caused by network failures, not all search traffic was analyzed. A computer running the MSN Search Application connected to the Web Server and searched on the Web for the term "Cisco". When the search returned a result, a user spent 30 seconds viewing the item. If the user did not purchase the item during this period, he/she was recorded as a skip. If the user was redirected from the Web site to the shopping page, the user was recorded as a skip. If no item was purchased, a skip was recorded. No skip data was recorded for searches that returned either a "no results found" or search engine-provided autofill result. The IE browser was tested by randomly searching the Web for the term "Snopes". In the process, the browser was redirected to the Web site as well as the search engine. The IE browser was then allowed to access the search engine and search again. Finally, the browser was redirected to the search engine. The task was repeated 5 times and the average time to access the search engine was recorded as well as the number of times the search engine found a result. The NetScape Voyager browser was tested in a similar fashion. The browser was randomly searched for the term "hacker". The process was repeated three times and the average time to access the search engine as well as the number of times the search engine found a result was recorded. We did not record the results found by the search engine since we were able to obtain the same results through the IE and NetScape browsers.

REUTERS/Handout UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) - The United Nations Security Council on Friday demanded Syria open up all the sites it has used to develop chemical weapons without delay and warned against their production. In a statement after a closed meeting on the issue, the 15-member council also warned states against transferring chemical arms and delivery equipment to Syria. The meeting came after the United States e79caf774b

So there's an automatic cause, and there's a natural cause, and there's a historical cause, and there's a philosophical cause. So all of these things that you have to learn about, and they're all there. A: It looks like the name at the beginning is in English, but the name in the middle is in German. Some people assume the text is German, but it could just as easily be Dutch or French or Italian or Swedish or any number of other languages. If you can find an Italian translation, you'll probably understand it better. The first word is written in the top right corner in Italian, if this is what you're referring to. A: The name of the author is Hermann Hueber (1881-1970), Professor at the Ludwig Maximilian University (MÃ¼nchen) and also to the Technical University of Munich (Braunschweig). On the German Wikipedia page, German Language Community (Leitende Kommunikation / LK, LÃ¼ftwesen.de) is mentioned as source. Q: 4th order polynomial that is positive on \mathbb{R} and 0 at $\sqrt[4]{3}$ I have to find a continuous 4th order polynomial $g(x)$ that is positive on \mathbb{R} and $g(0)=0$. The polynomial should pass through the point $\sqrt[4]{3}$ and have the same value at 0 and $\sqrt[4]{3}$. I've not found a simple polynomial that satisfies this but I found the following: $g_1(x)=x^4-3$ $\implies \deg(g_1) \leq 4$
