Electrical properties of six rat liver cell lines: the effects of size, composition, and shape. A wide range of sources have been used in the cell culture of rat liver. Since these cells have small dimensions (approximately 10 microm), it is of interest to know which type of media is best suited to support their propagation. For this purpose, several rat liver cell lines have been established in primary culture; in particular, viability and growth characteristics were studied to clarify their suitability for use in different assays. When the cell lines were exposed to a range of current densities (0.1-8.3 mA/cm²), the Balb/c-3T3, Rat-1, and Joko cells showed voltage-activated Na⁺ and Ca²⁺ currents. Rat-1, Balb/c-3T3, and Joko cells also exhibited voltage-activated K⁺ channels. Rat-1, Joko, and Fao produced a small outward conductance upon hyperpolarization, whereas a large inward K⁺ current was recorded in Rat-1, Joko, K7, and Mc-ARC cells. Viability was measured using seven kinds of well-established biomarkers. All cell lines retained their viability in primary culture for a period of at least 36 days. Based on cytochemical evaluation of histiocytosis, Balb/c-3T3 cells exhibited a high propensity for phagocytic activity. Phagocytic activity was greater in Rat-1, Mc-ARC, Joko, and K7 cells than in Balb/c-3T3 cells. Rat-1 cells were the most suitable for proliferating studies, since these cells are fusiform in shape and have a large volume. The current experiments demonstrate the value of cell line selection, with subsequent optimization of the type of media required for cell propagation.

Effects of nanoscale TiO₂ fillers on the tensile performance of poly(lactic acid). The development of biodegradable materials with improved mechanical properties and performances is of great interest. In the present study, two kinds of nanoscale TiO(2) fillers were incorporated into poly(lactic acid) (PLA) to develop a biodegradable composite. The effects of the nanoscale TiO(2) fillers on the tensile, Izod impact and thermal properties of PLA were studied. The nanosized TiO(2) fillers

Q: How to concatenate many values in SQLite? I have a SQLite database, and I want to concatenate a string with multiple integers, but I can not get the result I want. My data: case 1: qid,name,point1,point2,point3,point4,point5, case 2: qid,name,point1,point2,point3,point4,point5, case 3: qid,name,point1,point2,point3,point4,point5, and I want a string like that : string = "qid:1,name:cole,points:7,5,8,6,4,3,2"; as you can see, in each pointx there is a string, and the pointx is an integer. I tried this : SELECT substring(data, -5) + ':%d,%s' FROM qid_table but get this : points:8,4,5,2 points is the string, but there is no 7,8,6, and 4,3,2 which is what i want. So I want a string with a new line in each pointx A: This can be done with a join. For SQLite, I think the most efficient way is to concatenate the CASE statements into one (and have one fixed where clause so we use the column aliases as that): SELECT CASE id WHEN 1 THEN 'qid:1,name:cole,points:7,5,8,6,4,3,2' ELSE 'qid:2,name:carl,points:8,5,9,6,4,3,2' END FROM qid_table WHERE...; To eliminate the need for an explicit join, we can use a temp table: CREATE TEMPORARY TABLE tmp_table SELECT CASE id WHEN 1 THEN 'qid:1,name:cole,points:7,5,8,6,4,3,2'
