Jurgen's Place: We Are America We're delighted to learn of the grand opening of Jurgen's Place, named for New Orleans resident and Pelican Press patron Jurgen Brug. There's no better time than the present to visit the place, given the abundance of food, music, and delicious and beautiful people at the New Orleans Summer Film Festival. And with all the wonderful venues, it's sure to be worth the trip—especially if you like food, film, and cocktails. Jurgen's Place is at 1007 Royal Street and you can read more about it here. A very special thanks goes out to this small restaurant for their continued support of The Pelican Press.
Perennial ryegrass toxicity toward feeding and grazing cattle. Short-term feeding trials were conducted with cattle in three commercial feedlots to determine whether toxicoses related to perennial ryegrass (Lolium perenne) are of acute or chronic duration. When ingested with the resulting milk, perennial ryegrass increased fecal moisture. Ruminants, in general, adversely affected by plant exudates include the more susceptible individuals and those that consume the toxic exudate before it is completely digested. The immediate environment of ruminants is less toxic than that of monogastrics because of ruminal characteristics that require plant metabolites to be excreted as undigested, intact plant material. It is likely that a ruminant will ingest more feed over a longer period, and one could speculate that a chronic toxicosis was established.
Q: Why is this with a ternary operator not working as expected I am using this in my current situation: `if(a == 0) { $sql="insert into `tablename` ('label1','label2'`
