Solid-phase synthesis of a library of octahydroindoles and their biological evaluation as inhibitors of acetylcholinesterase and serotonin. [structure: see text] An efficient solid-phase method has been developed for the synthesis of octahydroindoles in a diversity-oriented library. Chiral octahydroindoles and their analogs were prepared, and their inhibition of acetylcholinesterase (AChE) and serotonin receptor was examined by means of biochemical screening. Several octahydroindoles inhibited AChE, and their enantioselectivity was found to be dependent on the size and structure of the substituents on the aromatic ring. A pyridinium salt that contains a chiral quaternary carbon center was found to be a potent AChE inhibitor with an IC50 value in the low nanomolar range, and enantioselectivity was observed for the eutomers.
