Every year, we add new features and elements of authenticity - from increased ball control and ball physics to an expanded injury model - to more gameplay moments and more ways to play. In FIFA 22, we are introducing real-world innovation into core gameplay and mode play, building on fundamental gameplay advances from FIFA 19 - and this year, we are adding even more. New real-world innovations: The physical play experience is closer to the real thing than ever. No more stale "push buttons and wait" moments, as we're introducing deeper, more responsive animations that create a new level of physicality and intensity in every player's movements. The difficulty is higher than ever, with more depth and smarter AI. Pushing buttons and waiting has become the new skill in FIFA 22. Card Roles are now more nuanced, with a new Performance based system that determines which cards to play and when. In addition, players now have an easier time changing how they play, based on how they are using the ball, position, or the rest of the team. The training and fatigue modes are more intense than ever. And training management has been overhauled to ensure that training intensity will be tailored appropriately for each player. Training Mode also introduces an entirely new Coaching system, with more than 2.5 times as many challenges to manage. The pace of the game has increased, making matches more tactical, action-packed, and unpredictable - and now there's more risk/reward to the game. For the first time, we're introducing true penalty shootouts, giving coaches the choice of penalties taken or
