Internet Explorer 7 on a web site I am working on. I have made some research and stumbled upon an article about it on the web: "ADO error 324 and details"

However, my site does not have any access to a database and does not connect to a database in my code. The web site is only rendering a page with some graphics and links on it. The code looks like this: `function onLoad() { document.getElementById("number").style.display="none"; }` However, every time I am on the site, I am getting the error. I have also found that the error 324 is caused by the web service my web site connects to. However, I do not have access to this web service, I only have the code in my web site. Is there any way of performing security checks or something like that on my site, that would make it so that the error 324 is not thrown? A: Try this function onLoad() { if (window.XMLHttpRequest)

the data values in a pandas dataframe by a column value I have a pandas DataFrame and I would like to group it by the values of a column. In this example, I would like to group it by the column
"Model" and sum up the "Price" values. I can only think of a loop solution where I extract the index of the dataframe as list and iterate through the index to find the values. Is there a better way of doing this? Example data: import pandas as pd df = pd.DataFrame({"Brand": ["Ford",
"Ford"], "Model": ["Merc", "Merc"], "Price": [200, 100], "Year": [2000, 2000]}) df.set_index(['Brand', 'Model', 'Year'], inplace=True) df.sort_values(by='Year', ascending=True, inplace=True) print df

Output: Price Brand Model Year Merc Merc 2000 Ford Merc 2000 Desired
output: Price Brand Model Year Ford Merc 2000 200 Merc Merc 2000 100 A: Use
GroupBy.sum with reset_index: print (df.groupby(['Brand', 'Model'])['Price']
.sum() .rename_axis(('Price', None), axis=1) .sort_values(by='Year', ascending=True) .reset_index()) Brand Model Year Price 0 Ford Merc 2000 2000 200 1 Merc Merc 2000 2000 100 If Year is

Although their prevalence is low, feline enteric parasites are of public health significance due to their potential for zoonotic transmission. Feline enteric parasites are significant in domestic cats because they often represent a chronic, persistent, subclinical or clinically apparent, significant, or even life-threatening component of a host's GI tract. The most common feline enteric parasite is a spirurid nematode, Toxocara cati; this parasite can be particularly difficult to eradicate in cats that are fed commercial cat foods. Giardia spp. are also common in cats and can cause clinical disease. However, feline giardiasis is often subclinical, and clinical signs are associated with other conditions.

Research on the ecology and transmission of feline intestinal parasites is essential for the development of strategies to control these agents. This chapter is divided into two major parts. First, it reviews the more common feline intestinal parasites (Toxocara cati, Toxascaris leonina, Giardia duodenalis, and Cryptosporidium spp.) and discusses their prevalence, mode of transmission, and clinical signs. Second, it discusses risk factors for developing feline enteric parasites and provides guidance for successful prevention and control efforts.
