major global health concern. A substantial body of evidence points to a role for the hypothalamus in regulating body weight homeostasis. However, the role of the hypothalamus in body weight regulation remains controversial because of the multitude of neuronal populations in the hypothalamus that are involved in appetite, energy expenditure, and reward. Here, we used transgenic reporter mice to narrow the focus on the periventricular nucleus (PeN) of the hypothalamus, which contains the melanocortin-4 receptor (MC4R) neurons that are considered the master regulators of energy balance, although other hypothalamic populations including the paraventricular nucleus of the hypothalamus (PVN) or the lateral hypothalamic area also contain these cells. Using these reporter mice, we show that the melanocortin system is the major neuronal population in the PeN that senses the circulating metabolic status and is activated during high-fat diet feeding, whereas other neuronal populations such as neurons in the lateral hypothalamic area, hypothalamic melanocortin-3-receptor expressing neurons, and PVN neurons are unaffected during high-fat feeding. These data suggest that the melanocortin system is the major central sensory system that generates homeostatic responses to changes in the external environment and that it may become an attractive therapeutic target in the fight against the obesity epidemic. In vivo evaluation of the case report. We describe the retinal vascular response to hypertension in a patient who developed bilateral retinal vessel occlusion. Retinal vascular changes such as microaneurysms and dilatation of arterioles were not observed prior to the onset of hypertension. Thus, factors other than elevated blood pressure may also be involved in the development of those microvascular changes. We believe that retinal microvascular changes may be a pathologic finding in patients with hypertension. Q: Python: Iterating over a list (of multiple lists) - adding elements to a new list Is there a way to iterate over a list, so that each element is added to a new list? Currently, I have a list with about 15 lists in it. Each of those lists all have roughly the same element count, however, I need to add a new element to each of them. What I would like to do is: Input: [['1', '2', '3'], ['4', '5', '6'], ['7', '8', '9'], ['10', '11', '12']] Output: [['1', '2', '3', 'new_value'], ['4', '5', '6', 'new_value'], ['7', '8', '9',

'new_value'], ['10', '11', '12', 'new_value']] Is there a simple way to do this? A: If each of the lists is the same size, use list comprehension: >>> l = [['1', '2', '3'], ['4', '5', '6'], ['7', '8', '9'], ['10', '11', '12']] >>> new_value = 'new_value' >>> [[x, y] + [new_value] for x, y in
