How to install programs on mac 1.5.A Project Has To Be Alive ~ There are three reasons why people come to my yoga classes: for exercise, for relaxation, or to connect. This has never been a problem for me as I'm a trained instructor and all three of these go hand in hand with yoga. I thought I would share with you here some of the things I've learnt from students over the years that are really helpful for a yoga teacher to have in their teachings...

- 1.They Can Tell When You Are Trying I have been teaching for 14 years. I have often had students come to class who are straight away identifiable as advanced practitioners because they always leave class feeling so fulfilled. If I can do this I know I've made a good class. And sadly for me, I don't always. Not all students leave class the same. Sometimes they come with their arms folded, with a frown on their face. And that's okay. It means the practice is working.
- 2.They Can Tell When You Aren't Trying Hmmm. Well it's always hard to predict when a student won't be happy. There are some days I want to sit down with them and discuss their practice, or just sit in quiet meditation. But I always know when I've forgotten to do this. The first time I moved away from my home city and started teaching I was offered a wonderful space and space to teach in a beautiful studio. I was really excited. I had spent months preparing for my first class. I had researched the area to see what it had to offer and had written my first schedule. Everything was perfect. I had even lined up a bunch of special guests. But I knew it would only last a month. And I knew I would miss my family and friends. So I told them I couldn't move. And I couldn't. I realised that the students are always right. The first class went okay
