From the Wikipedia entry: In Dota 2 the four heroes selected for each game act as a team (sometimes known as the "core heroes"). Each player is able to pick one "core hero" and a maximum of two of the other three, depending on mana. The goal of the game is to destroy the enemy's ancient while protecting your own. Because of the focus on the core heroes, the importance of the other three heroes is reduced and it is possible to have a very different game from one with many carry heroes to one with a very low amount of carry heroes. Nawangriging Rigpa Nawangriging Rigpa (Nawang Rigpa) is the translation of the Sanskrit term "Nāyasattā", which is the word for ineffable wisdom teachings of certain Asian religions. This translation was probably made by Lama Zopa and his student Yongdzin. There are a number of different translations of nāyasattā. For example, the central tradition of Tibetan Buddhism and some Bonpo sects use "Clear Light." Some Kagyu and Gelug sects use "Wisdom Understanding." Some sects use "Nameless Awareness." Some Buddhist sects use "Awakened Consciousness" or "Knowledge of the Path" or "Accomplishment." I've seen several spells that look like they'd be great for spelunking, while staying out of the opponent's reach. The Buf Me spells are probably my favorites. Just explain they'll buff you, and you'll hopefully forget about getting caught. But also mention that you'll have to examine them if you're looking to redeem them. Everyone else is trying to throw their eyes in your direction and think "Man, this guy's a true paladin" as they give up the fight. I've always imagined the paladin's were a "just in case" set of "right-about-now" spells, which would be handy to keep in a backpack, and you'd just have to think up a good scenario. No, no, not set in stone. They will be useful for spelunking though. Originally Posted by GnomeHein

Archonation came to realize that the world of Tekken needed an Evo team. While the TEAM's first attempt at competing in the tournament was to perform in a team division, they far exceeded everyone's expectations and brought an unprecedented amount of fans into the Japanese fighting game community. Since that first event, Archonation, Shane, and founding team member Patrick Boogins have remained dedicated to the team's need to at least try to compete in Tekken 7. The team has proven to be anything but a fluke as it has been able to compete time and time again on the biggest stage the fighting game community can offer. However, 2018's EVO had some upsets due to no Canadian Tekken 7 competitors. Archonation, alongside rising star Justin Wong decided to step up in the scene and accept a challenge in Street Fighter V. Justin Wong, a first year tournament competitor at EVO 2015 competed alongside Archonation and Shane in 18: SCARZ. Their run ended in Best 2 out of three with one win and one draw. Following the tournament was the qualification matches for EVO where the Canadian squad who now had the tag of "Canadian Heroes" won over the team of GRANNY THE TELEFORCE GIANTESS in a rematch, as well as beat NSG|Tokido, undefeated EVO 2015 competitor KoE, and finish runner up to the team of UIU|IdT a team notorious for complicating matches and doing suspect tactics. In Street Fighter V Justin and team Archonation marked off the first year of their two year sponsorship of the team, and came out on the short end of the stick. With competing in only two events in their current partnership with TEKKEN 7 producer Katsuhiro Harada and Tekken 7 publisher Bandai Namco, Archonation's best EVO tournament results and only TD success to date have come by fighting for them since switching gears from Street Fighter V on. With Teikoku Bank fighting as Archonation in EVO 2018, Team Aeon Drive will make a fresh appearance at the top tier tournament. The team is currently level 5 on points in NA ranked matches, sits as one of the top tiers in the
