Once you get there, search for TrueCrypt.exe, right-click on it and choose "Extract Here." Next, extract the Truecrypt files from the zip file you got from Microsoft. Next, connect your SSD to your computer and install the files. Finally, open your start menu and type "truecrypt" into the search bar. Type "open truecrypt" in the search bar. Select "open." Select your SSD. You have to select the drive you want to use. If you want to store all your files and folders, be sure the selected drive is set as the active drive. Click on "OK." You'll be asked whether or not you want to allow Truecrypt to manage your settings. Click "OK" to make it happen. To test if everything is working correctly, make a folder on the hard drive and make sure the contents are placed there. You can always use a more modern solution such as BitLocker Drive Encryption, which is basically Truecrypt with more complicated security options.
