What's New in the Snipline?

Anyone who has ever thrown together a template from a handful of lines of code will know all too well the pain and frustration of not having the right code to automate common tasks in an efficient and neat way. In other words, much of the burden of having to track down and find appropriate snippets to carry out your particular task has to be endured. What you get with Snipline is a handy tool for storing snippets which helps to make finding the right code for a particular task much faster. Not only that, but you can store the snippets you create as well as have them accessed on any device with an active Internet connection. How can Snipline help me? In many cases, you'll be able to find a snippet that covers whatever you're looking to do. That is, if you're coding a simple piece of code, you could find an appropriate snippet that you could copy to your clipboard and paste into any of your programs. Similarly, if you're a developer and you're looking to automate a particularly complex task, you could find a snippet or snippet that does just that. In short, you'll be able to store snippets of code, you can access them wherever you are, and you can even replicate the snippet for others so they can utilize the same code. This is where the app really comes into its own: it's ideal for anyone in need of a sophisticated snippet, not only that, but it's also a perfect tool for the more experienced user looking to speed up the development of snippets. More about Snipline: Here are some of the highlights of Snipline: • The app is cloud-based and gives you instant access to your snippets from anywhere. • Each snippet is stored as an add-in, that is, an extension for Microsoft Word or Excel which lets you utilize the snippets on a particular document. • The app allows you to share your snippets with others by exporting them as a.exe file which the recipient can install onto their own machines. • The app's CLI (command line interface) lets you assign variables to your snippets in order to personalize it as needed. • The app supports a variety of file types, including as files, images, scripts, code snippets, even text. • Snippets can be seen in three modes; plain text, a table, or in an Excel spreadsheet. • You can encrypt your snippets
