The steam locomotive The Lady was built in 1924 for the Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Western Railway (IC&W), one of the only companies in North America to purchase the EMD "E9" Series locomotive. This was the first successful model of the SD series, and set the standard that the 'SD' series would operate by. The Lady retains the historic colour scheme of her sister locomotive, the Flying Yankee, a red/black livery used by the IC&W until the 1960s. The Lady is one of only two E9 Series locomotives remaining in North America. The other was acquired by the Indiana Rail Road in 1974, and is one of the few preserved ALCo E9's. The Lady was purchased by the Indiana Rail Road in 1974, and has been at the Indiana Railway Museum since 1975. As of 2018, The Lady is in good running condition, and she is fully operational. The Lady: The Lady is a member of 'Class A' - Electric Multiple Units. Her electric powerpack has 3 x E9A20-2 type motors. Her steam locomotive is a rare 'C' type - steam locomotive. The driving wheels are inclined at a 38 degree angle, which adds to the
