Q: Error in passing function pointer in partial order reduction on CUDA I am porting a C program to a CUDA version. The program relies on CUDA to reduce a partial order of a function pointer. Specifically, the first reduction step passes a function pointer whose call-back has registered success on CUDA by success_cb_idx, and it fails if the callback returns failure with cb_err_idx, as described in the following CUDA __device__ code : int __device__ next_step(unsigned int idx, int* u_max) { int new_upper_bound = idx, new_lower_bound = idx, cb = NULL; unsigned int y; for(y = 1; y 1) { /* update the best lower and upper bound / { / update the best lower bound from the new iteration */ lb_lower_bound[y] = *lb;

Rule On Friday, May 19th, Desert Edge Games hosted a board game meet-up at their local Game Showcase shop in Uniondale, New York. At this event they ran two sessions of our new game Fantasy Grounds, one of which focused on a bit of D&D-style wargaming. This event is fun for gamers of all ages and experience levels, so if you're interested in checking it out, here's the schedule: Game Theme: Anarchy & IllusionBattle Clans of Albion vs Chaos Representatives of Fury Description:... The Chaos Knights were victorious, but at the cost of a dying captain and most of his followers. The Knights retreated to their keep, where they mourn and drink themselves into oblivion. Meanwhile, the escaped Chaos Captain, Chaos Lord Nidun has invaded the Wasteland, and seeks funds to buy back soldiers and ship to challenge the Knights on their grounds. The town then tries to find a buyer for the defeated or slain Knights. Either way, the Kings of Neutral Point will just lose money, but how much they'll lose is anyone's guess.... V. Fayne (Modules Editor). We start up with a high level outline of the forces, and each side to review it, as well as the war council information obtained from the map. In Lord Nidun's camp, things are pretty relaxed until the start of our second session! That's when he starts gathering up the forces and moves his men through the key points in the settlement towards their opponents, from the north, south, and west. During the initial stages of combat, the armies of Albion and Fury battle on the main field, with the full melee units of each force trading heavy blows in the melee. The Chaos Lord has a small advantage in numbers, but he's got a skill & dexterity bonus, so he can trade blows with the Knights. They're aiming to break the line and deal the final blows on their enemies. As these battles are unfolding, the Chaos Captain and his band of allies have begun their assault on the keep. Battle ensues in the town between the forces of neutral point and a few Chaos mercenaries who wanted to join Nidun against the Knights. As the battle turned towards the town, and its defenses, the Chaos Captain & his allies retreat and make their way through a breach in the wall. Their retreat is just what the Knights want, the town is a more vulnerable location to defend. The knights run in pursuing
