What is the difference between Runtime.exec("dir"); Runtime.getRuntime().exec("dir"); A: The difference is that exec has a slightly different signature: public native String exec(String cmd) throws IOException; Whereas getRuntime() has: public static native String exec(String cmd) throws IOException; The former will throw an exception if dir is not a valid command. The first Democratic debate was the BBC's flagship political programme, hosted at the party's headquarters in the capital, hosted by Jeremy Paxman. It was at times combative and at times funny and it covered a wide range of topics. It was challenging, too, as candidates were expected to answer questions in just under five minutes, against a backdrop of a TV studio with an extensive built-in schedule. But on screen, the debate might have been even more unwieldy, as some coverage was cut down to 40 minutes for the first part and even that was cut short for a number of them. More content and better quality would have been likely to increase viewership and improve many of the problems with the first debate, such as its flimsiness in comparison to other primetime political shows such as NBC's Meet the Press. The BBC responded to criticism of the first debate in a statement on its website: "The BBC has been clear that we will not broadcast the presidential debate because it would be an inappropriate step to take ahead of the election." That was true, but it also seems a little underwhelming, because the broadcaster had been planning to broadcast the event even before Donald Trump's tweet about it on the morning of the first debate. Many critics suggested that the relative slightness of the alleged lack of commercial benefit might make this a difficult challenge for the BBC in terms of its decision to not broadcast the debate. But the host was widely praised for the vigour of the debate and the humour and sense of occasion that was evident throughout. Paxman conducted himself as

The Uber driver who was caught on video punching a passenger will not be charged by police. It was captured on video footage, which was shared to Facebook, that showed a white passenger getting out of a car at a kerbside location in the city. When the passenger tried to open the door of his Uber car, the driver followed him out of the vehicle. As both men were walking to the back of the vehicle, the driver hit the passenger in the face, which sent him to the ground. He then left the scene before police arrived. The incident happened at 6.25pm on November 14. Predictors of intravenous sedation success, sedation time, and adverse events in the ED. Intravenous sedation (IVS) is an important component of emergency care, and pharmacists play an integral role in ensuring its safe delivery. The objective of this study was to identify patient, process, and provider-level predictors of IVS success, length of sedation, and adverse events (AEs) during sedation. A retrospective review of all patients who underwent IVS in the emergency department (ED) from March 2015 to March 2016 in a single US hospital was performed. Patients  $\geq 18$  years old who had a successful IVS were included. Sedation time was defined as the number of minutes from IVS drug administration to sedation success. Primary outcomes included successful IVS, length of sedation, and AEs. Multivariate analysis was performed to determine the relationship between variables and IVS success, sedation time, and AEs. Of 751 sedations, 496 (64.8%) were successful. On multivariate analysis, female sex (OR, 4.21; 95% CI, 1.73-10.30), higher chest pain severity (OR, 1.46; 95% CI, 1.03-2.05), and higher opioid dose (OR, 1.22; 95% CI, 1.08-1.37) were independent predictors of sedation success.
