The Fadeless Ring of Grace, a legendary artifact that had been said to be lost for 10,000 years, was discovered in a small island. The Ring's bearer was a knight called Tarnished who had renounced the crime of killing and corruption. However, his act of generosity had proven too great to the gods and they created a voracious monster called the Fallen Dragon that pursued Tarnished and surrounded him. The Ring of Grace was stolen by the Fallen Dragon, its original form was lost. It is said that the Ring of Grace was handed down to another hero, but he died, and the Ring was tossed away by his lover. To prevent another full-scale disaster, the people of the village hid the Ring of Grace in the ancient ground. This Ring is different from any ordinary Ring. With its power, the Ring of Grace can protect the wielder from any danger and impart the power of a god to his or her arms. It can also conceal the wielder's own magical powers. However, if the Ring of Grace is placed on a corpse or a corpse-like object, it is transformed into a skeleton. The corpses that the Ring is placed on all have a horrifying expression. The souls of those that have died by using their power as a sword, goblin, or monster. The Ring of Grace is a dice that falls and spins on a table. However, the one who wields the Ring of Grace alone determines the direction. No matter how many spins it makes, a single white die can only land on a certain number. The results can be good, and the colors of the remaining space indicate the strength of the results. bff6bb2d33

Imagine a scenario in which you are carrying a backpack full of groceries to the mailbox, but your back is telling you to slow down. It makes sense to you that a backpack that can accelerate quickly with minimal physical effort could be very useful. Imagine that the backpack could actually communicate with you and it could be the start of a new, highly sophisticated system that would reduce your need to get weighed each time you put on or take off a backpack, or could even be used as some sort of invisible weight-loss device. The backpack can sense that you are carrying a heavy burden and will adapt its motion to you, reduce your required back-straining effort, and make your movement more efficient. This idea was developed by Dr. Charbel Fatakji and Assoc. Professor, Subodh Gupta of the Mechanical Engineering Department at the University of Alberta in Edmonton, Alberta, Canada, as part of their research project that focuses on energy harvesting, sensor technology, and smart wearable systems that will be used for mobile applications. Smart materials, also referred to as smart textiles, are materials that can remember their past and remember their future. They sense the environment around them and then communicate and control their behavior. So, what can a smart material do if it knows how much weight you are wearing?
