On a technical level, the new engine enables players to react faster and deliver more powerful and accurate touches by using on-pitch animations in the build phase (e.g. during sprints, make-ups, and when taking on-ball interceptions). Moreover, control intelligence has been enhanced through innovative AI decision-making and predictive tackling. Player-player interactions such as shoulder charges and jukes are also now a better reflection of real-life situations, with more contextual animations taking place. A big focus for this year's edition was to correct issues such as inconsistent ball physics and player speeds. This has been achieved thanks to a greater level of positional awareness and the new 'vibrancy' engine for the ball. The new 'vibrancy' engine relies on key player information and contextual animations to react to high-pressure situations on-field. This includes the standard 'vibrancy' engine as well as new physics-driven animations that can create the sensation of rebounding shots, rebounding tackles and new dribbling moves. A new injury-recovery system replaces the approach of a "static, hard" hit in 2015 FIFA Ultimate Team Ultimate Mode, replacing a single injury factor with a free-to-impose chain reaction of injury risks. This gives players greater injury intelligence so they can deal with further risks and recover themselves. Player feedback will also help players adapt to the impact of the new injury system on Ultimate Team Ultimate Mode, in addition to the adjustments to ball physics and player speeds. Every FIFA™ game has a single narrative thread that is driven by real-life events and provides context and background information. With FIFA 19, FIFA announced an opening line that "every star from the African Region for this year's Africa Cup of Nations" had made the 2018 team. Meanwhile, players took to the pitch in their competition finery for a new narrative that saw their star players make waves on the world stage. One superstar after the other was being put to the test: Gabon's Pierre-Emerick Aubameyang, whose goals against Libya, Russia, and Senegal saw him finish as the joint second best African Player of the Year. Our official FIFA Twitter account earlier this year tweeted that world class Brazilian midfielder Paulinho was heading to the Yellow Card. He duly obliged with a bunch of yellow cards in the match. Paulinho was

What's new in Fifa 22:

- Career - Play as either a manager or a player in FIFA 22. Play how you want with the new manager controls, which will greatly improve the way you manage the club. On pitch and in training, you'll now manage your team based on your style of play and use new control parameters. Career is no longer locked and drag will be coming to male agents as well.

- The New Tackling System - The new Kicking and Tackling system from FIFA 21 will be coming to this year's installment in the franchise. Players will be penalised less for bad tackles and defenders who often break up play with their dirtiest tackles will no longer be rewarded.
- Out of Area Shooting - A new "out of area shooting" technology will now be used to boost player performances for shooting moves aimed outside of the box. It'll be adjusting considering that the angle of attack. Its triggers will also be raising and lower across the entire skill range.
- REAL EFFECTS - Cars and the environment/buildings will show more detailed materials, more realistic weather, playing conditions will change based on the game's atmosphere, and crowd noise will be much more realistic.
- Sight Reflections - The graphics of the stadium will now mirror the player's views. It will also simulate depth by displaying new multi-layered shadows on new surfaces with clearer intersection/overshadows.
- Improved Penalty System - Whether you're shooting or taking a penalty, the accuracy of the penalty or shot will be influenced by the player's skill level. You can now control the quality of your penalty kicks: make them more powerful, sneak a "lobbed" penalty, or direct it to where the defenders can't reach.
- Clear, Official Dribble - Players who execute a powerful dribble can now be seen clearly while protecting the ball. Once their opponents spot them, they'll be exposed for defenders to easily intercept those dribbles.
- Enhanced El Clasico - Players with the skills to play the important game in Europe will be rewarded by the engine from C.A.P. (Cinematic AI Player). They'll require opponents to beat a lengthy combination of new dribbling and strength challenges that players won't frequently face to complete. They
