A: The following line generates an output, which contains the list of IP addresses that exist in this server and are not banned from accessing the website: `if ($_POST['banIP'] == "yes") { if ($_POST['banSubnet'] == "yes") { $banIP = $_POST['banIP']; $banSubnet = $_POST['banSubnet']; $data = file("data/IPs/" . $banIP . "/" . $banSubnet . ".txt"); foreach ($data as $line) { if(strstr($line, "not banned")) { echo "$line "; } } } else { $banIP = $_POST['banIP']; echo "$banIP:n "; } }` The file() function is used to read the list of IP addresses from the "data/IPs/{this IP}/{IPs subnet}/not banned.txt" file. Additionally, you can add IPs to the banned list. You'll have to first remove those IPs from the "data/IPs/{this IP}/{IPs subnet}/not banned.txt" file, and then add them to the banIP variable, which is then used to create the shell function which removes IPs from the banned list. I leave this code in case you want to add other IPs to the banned list. Q: Create a distribution with gmrpm I create a new pdf(a) (with ewpgfdecoifaceofpdf\pdfliteral) with gmrpm. How can I specify a alpha distribution type? I know that in an example, I can use `ewpgfdecoifaceofpdf\pdfliteral{\pgfplotsset{/pgf`

A: putting a percent sign before the filename prevents it trying to treat the entire string as a regular expression. I'll leave the actual regex solution up to someone else if desired... Q: How to avoid object from being exposed in session How do I make sure that an object that I am caching won't be exposed in session after the session has been closed? A: If you don't want to be exposing the details of your Session for all to see, one thing you could do is store your entities in a proxied object. Your proxied object could contain your Session and any additional data you want to keep secret. By default, the Proxy pattern is used in Java where the Proxy class is implemented to implement a wrapper around the target interface. Consider the following pseudocode : public class Request { public Response proxy(String request) throws Exception { HttpRequest httpRequest = new HttpRequest(request); Session session =... do your business...; // Perhaps execute some queries return new Response(... do your business...); } } Now when you write your Request you can do something like this : Request r = new Request(); Proxy p = r.proxy(""); p.getFoo(); And the getFoo() method will be transparent to you, you won't be able to tell that you're actually invoking it on the proxy object. If you want to expose more details than this, you could proxy your Session : public class SessionProxy { public SessionProxy(Session session) { this.session = session; } private Session session; // All the methods of your Session implementation // will be intercepted in the proxy object } You can then do the following : SessionProxy p = new SessionProxy(mySession); p.getFoo(); And the getFoo() method will be transparent to you, you won't be able to tell that you're actually invoking it on the proxy object.
