The technology also enables the player to alter their attributes, such as dribbling, speed and control. There are also new careers where players will need to complete differing attributes, such as obtaining a high number of aerial duels or making a high number of assists. "Game faces can alter a player's game," said Jeff Bruch, executive producer of FIFA football. "The technology has a huge advantage now in being able to capture how a player moves in the real world, meaning all players, no matter where they are on the pitch, can feel like they are back on their home turf. It's not something we would have had years ago, now with this technology and all that we've learned from motion capture, we can achieve so much more than before." What's new in Fifa 22:

- The first major addition to this year's game is HyperMotion technology, which taps into actual player movements captured when captured during a real-life, high-intensity football match. FIFA 22 highlights players physically performing in more realistic, high speed matches and adds energy while crossing, pressure-testing defenders, and much more. Authentic animations in training, challenges and pre-season friendlies are all enhanced using this component.
- FIFA 22 features a new story driven Captains talk mode. The minigame is based on the well-known Captain mode in FIFA 11 and requires the player to pick two natural teammates and critique them as they attempt to score in a shooting challenge. Players can also use the new Pass & Shoot system for this feature. Valid tactics are available for both novice or experienced players.

Challenge Missions offer new ways to unlock core items and players. A new Premier League Survival challenge offers a weekly objective to help players progress through the leagues in consecutive seasons. This will take place from 2018/19.

- Players can no longer use a fix created by EA which disabled players becoming heels and created a new scheme AI that can no longer initiate or predict plays. This can cause turn entries to be misjudged.

- Combos and passing abilities have been re-balanced. Created Player talents have been adjusted to provide more options to how players can be played.

Combo: Creates more scoring chances and more pressure against the opponents. This could enhance and define a players play style significantly.

- The Concept of Height and Speed enables opponents to control the match more easily by forcing players into a helpless football role, as they will be too tall and fast for the player to win the ball.
