Most people buy malware online like through registrars like a central registrar. What most people don't realise is that these registrars are often out of business or not online anymore and there may be some malware hiding there. As it is often difficult or impossible to determine what is malware, I at least try to find out what is on the page and warn people of potential badware. I also help people to protect themselves by suggesting good registrars to go to (if any are available). It is one of my goals to eventually make a list of good registrars with a good reputation - so people know where to go to get a good price for the legitimate software they want. My goal is to help both people and software publishers get what they want. But I have no idea who is this famous "Doctor1" to try to take credit for my work. Also, it appears he is assuming that his "PoC script" is the best way to find malware. This does not seem to be the case when it comes to finding malicious websites. On a particular page on the website where I found the link "H.264 and MP3 Decoder Download" (I was looking to find some decoders. But what I found were browser plugins. How can you stop browsers from automatically installing the plugins. It looks like one of the plugins for Mozilla Firefox is not compatible with the browser's user access control settings.An experimental study of the viscoelastic properties of an extracellular matrix 0cc13bf012
