Gameplay SPITE is a PC RTS from 1,125 Game Studios, Inc. and Green Hill Media, Inc.Gameplay SPITE brings a unique gameplay experience and a gritty fantasy setting to the PC! The players are the mage Kings, ruling their country from a personal fortress and using their magic to wage war against their enemies. The mage Kings are their most powerful allies and enforcers. Gameplay SPITE features strategic RTS gameplay and a new, never-before-seen fantasy setting and world!Game Features: A new strategic RTS focused on combat and magicPlay against another mage King or NPCGo head to head against other players in multiplayer AI gamesMultiplayer games, including cooperative and competitive modesNew, never before seen fantasy setting and world with new gameplay mechanics (Strategic RTS) Gameplay SPITE is a stand-alone fantasy RTS that combines medieval fantasy with a strategic real-time game. Each game of gameplay SPITE has different customizable mages and a host of strategic options to play to your tactical and strategic advantage. A powerful storyline links each gameplay SPITE game and a common set of game mechanics defines gameplay SPITE.Gamification Gameplay SPITE has many unique gamification mechanics, including the following: War, economy, political intrigue and diplomacy, and alliances (Alliances are a special type of contract between two nations to ally forces against one or more hostile countries. You can choose to be allied with another kingdom if it promises you an advantage, or you can choose to turn your alliance into a full-blown war.) Each mage King has its own unique set of units, spells, and potions. Sieges are strategy mechanics that can be purchased and placed in cities with other objects in gameplay SPITE. Lore, diplomacy, and alliances all play a major role in gameplay SPITE. Games are unique tactical battles where each team has its own map and fortresses for players to build and garrison Independent quests, custom events, and the ability to choose a role for every character add to gameplay SPITE's unique feel. See the gameplay SPITE video! Gameplay SPITE's strategy combat revolves around the unit placement and management of armies of foot soldiers, cavalry and mages. Each unit has a health bar that lets you know how much damage they can take before they are no longer in the fight. The health bar is determined by the unit's class and the strength of the mage. Gameplay SPITE uses a turn-based system, and players must react to their

Solo map Solo map is a kind of normally rectangular military map (large format) that is generally used for small scale (not larger than 1:25000) military operations. They feature flags denoting regions or fronts (with or without arrows, shown in US military literature and near top right of US Army Military Map Sheet, in lieu of additional symbols showing the type of front. Strategic/area maps are similar and but include smaller (1:20000 or 1:10.000) colored, pencil-drawn symbols. There is no standardization between vendors for the appearance, symbology and raster orientation, making for potentially large variations in appearance. System Requirements For SPITE:

One of the first things to mention is that this game was published on August 1, 2004. It was a sequel to Crusader Kings, released just four months earlier, but it was built from scratch. The development cycle was around eight months long, with release occurring shortly before Christmas 2004. Crusader Kings II was created by the same team that made Crusader Kings. Chris Avellone (lead designer and writer) and Seth Robertson (lead designer) worked on both Crusader Kings and Crusader Kings II. For the first time in the Crusader Kings series, the team was able to
