It also has a high rate of perpetrators who are not known to the victim. This project aims to help address this problem by developing and validating a smartphone-based system that can be used by the general public to determine the most likely offender who perpetrated a specific sexual assault crime. The project will focus on any one of a number of crimes in which the perpetrator/s are unknown. We will conduct a rigorous two-step study to: 1) develop an Android-based app that prompts respondents to answer a series of questions to determine the most likely suspect of a crime, and 2) validate the app by conducting a randomized controlled trial comparing a smartphone-based system to a traditional in-person method that is currently used by law enforcement. The app will allow users to select whether they would like to help identify the perpetrator of a crime (anonymous or non-anonymous), and then answer a series of questions that will determine who is most likely to be the perpetrator. Having information that is readily available to the public about likely perpetrators could prevent other assaults and help bring justice to victims. If the app is shown to be valid and effective, we will explore applications that could be adapted by local law enforcement to create a database that can then be accessed via the internet.

Exercise-associated

rhabdomyolysis: relevance for the athlete.
Rhabdomyolysis, the destruction of skeletal muscle cells and associated release of myoglobin, causes acute renal failure and is a frequent complication of exertional activity. In the majority of cases, the clinical presentation is one of sudden, intense pain in the muscles with subsequent weakness. Following a preexisting condition such as a muscle fibre membrane leak, alcohol intoxication, hypothermia, renal failure or other systemic illnesses, the condition can be triggered through strenuous physical activity

ISO/IEC 13166-1:2003 with LID The TDP5 Arena 3D ISO/IEC

13166-1:2003 with LID (ISO ID 123456-5) is an ISO/IEC standard for 3D geometric data exchange formats together with the ISO ID 1. It is used by companies in the fields of architecture, CAD, reverse engineering and construction. It is a completely free standard (ISO-standard) under the Open Standards Mechanism (OSM). An advantage of the standard is that it is almost 100% backward compatible with the XML Data Interchange Format (DIF - ISO 11179). Its range of coverage is from cone beam 3D scanners to 3D drawing packages. The standard is available in two versions, 1 and 2. The version 2 specification is a 3D graphics representation of the version 1, and was created to support new technologies in 3D graphics production. Its range of coverage is divided into three parts: geometry, styles and image sets. It does not specify a CAD standard such as IGES, STEP, X3D or COBie.
