Crack or Generate CODEX Code for Dragon Ball Xenoverse 2 Full Version.Q: What should I do if a request already exists? I'm writing an HTTP request parser in PHP. Here's a simplified version of my code: `$request = new HTTPRequest($url); // This code retrieves data from a REST-based API $data = $request->getCookie(); // If the API returns HTTP 200, then the data exists and it is parsed if ($request->getStatus() == 200) { // Parse the data and update the database $data = $request->getData(); } // Cache the data so it can be used later $request->setCookie($data);` Here's the problem: If the API already exists, then the request will already be parsed and the data retrieved. But if I insert the code above after the API call, what will happen is that I'll retrieve the data twice, once from the API, and once from the cache. That's clearly bad, right? What is the proper way to handle this situation? Any advice would be appreciated. A: You need to add the expiration time to the cookie, and if that isn't specified on the client side, it will expire within 1 hour. After that, the client will need to make another request. Q: Callback from TypeScript and AngularJS in Chrome dev tools I'm trying to add a callback in Dev Tools for Angular in Chrome, and my app is showing this warning: "TypeScript compiler cannot call non-bound function callback" example of the code: `export function someFunction(callback): void { callback(); } myFunction(callback) {`
