It's so nice. ----- daraosn awesome. someone needs to talk to the lead developer of app.net to get it adopted on reddit. I think app.net is very cool. my one critique of it is the 'public' and 'private' option - there should be public only and have no pricing. ----- daraosn oh, i just noticed there's no pricing. that's a bad mistake, there should be pricing. ~~~ drobati If you want we can fix it 0.174 0.485 -0.129

Richard R. Fulton
Richard Robert Fulton (November 15, 1927 - June 11, 2015) was an American psychologist, and a professor of psychology at Wesleyan University where he taught for almost four decades. He was a leading figure in the Personality and Social Psychology sections of the American Psychological Association. Fulton had a particular interest in personality and social psychology, and was the author of a number of seminal works concerning the topic. He edited the Handbook of Personality Theory and Research, and he also had pioneering research in the field of social conformity. Education Fulton graduated from the Yale Law School in 1948, then obtained his B.A. in Social Sciences from Wesleyan University in 1952. He earned his Ph.D. in Social Sciences from the University of Minnesota in 1955. Career He worked with other colleagues in the Journal of Personality until 1960, when he became a staff editor of the American Psychologist. In 1958, he joined the faculty of New York University as an assistant professor, rising to become an associate professor in 1962, and a full professor in 1966. It was in this role that he founded the Interest Group on Personality and Social Psychology of the American Psychological Association. In 1980, Fulton became a professor at Wesleyan University, where he remained until his retirement in 2003. He continued to do professional consulting work for some years thereafter. Work Fulton's academic career was dominated by a working interest in personality and social psychology. He was particularly interested in the influence that people have over one another. Much of his work in these areas concerned the nature of interpersonal influence and how interpersonal behavior can be explained by understanding the cognitive processes and motivations that underlie it. In this pursuit, he was particularly interested in the processes that lead people to act in certain ways, and in various contexts. He was also a pioneer in the area of social conformity and social identity. In both his scholarship and his professional practice, he often worked in teams to carry out analyses of such topics. Fulton was a leading exponent of the theory that

This is a role-playing game with a turn-based battles system. The story is told in various scenarios through interactive dialogues. A lot of items and equipment have been added to give the player more freedom of actions and decisions. To see how Green General was created read the Green General Producer's Blog here: Ok, I am always checking out new RPG's and lately there has been some awesome looking titles. Maybe it's just me though as I am really into the GBA (although my game ownership is changing because of the NES, SNES, N64 and PS2) I was watching this video last night of a game called Grownlanser that seems like it could be pretty cool. I think this is the first time I have actually seen a video of a person playing a game. It's actually pretty cool to see someone doing it.Q: Displaying function inside another function I was wondering if there's any way to do this without changing the global variable. Is there anyway to pass the function to that function? var showPrinter = function (str, message) { if (self.showPrinter) { self.showPrinter(str, message); } } function updateDoorHtml() { jQuery('#doorframe').html(self.showPrinter(storePrinterAddress, 'Printer Status:'+ printerStatus)); } A: You can use Function.prototype.bind(): jQuery('#doorframe').html(self.showPrinter(storePrinterAddress, 'Printer Status:'+ printerStatus).bind(self)); In ES5 you can also use apply(): jQuery('#doorframe').html(self.showPrinter.apply(self, [storePrinterAddress, 'Printer Status: ', printerStatus]).bind(self)); If you want the closure equivalent you can pass self as the first argument: jQuery('#doorframe').html(self.showPrinter(storePrinterAddress, 'Printer Status:'+ printerStatus)(self)); If you have an ES6 version of Node, you could use Async/await: jQuery('#doorframe').html(await self.showPrinter(storePrinterAddress, 'Pr
