Another few weeks passed by as I tried to force myself to keep looking through all the submissions, and now I finally have seen all of them. Some really bad ones, some really good ones. Some downright awful, some really good. Some absolutely AMAZING! I can't believe it, but I've written this thing and it's out of my hands, so check it out. There are only 2 submissions left. Let's hope they both pan out. Congrats to the ones that have been accepted. I'll be posting the links here as soon as I can! Now for the winners... THE WINNERS #1: #2: #3: I noticed something very strange on a message board I frequent. Over the course of days, it seemed there was a recent "shift" in the perception of the Biblical text. Previously, the Bible was taken to be about God's condemnation of homosexuality. A few days ago, though, the perception was changed: the Bible was reinterpreted to have been about God's condemnation of racism. The first person I asked was my supervisor. He replied, "No, he just thinks the text was ambiguous; that's what it was. But he's not so sure anymore." A few days later, my supervisor called me. I asked him about the conversation he'd had with the other two people involved in the "Bible" exchange. He explained the conversation he'd had with them, and also the additional things he had said to them in his blog. As it
