The anti-hypertensive effect of 50K-gene therapy in hypertensive rats. The present study explores the antihypertensive effect of 50K-gene therapy in hypertensive rats. The 50K-gene (F-50K) encodes a truncated carboxyl-terminal fragment of the human 50K protein, which is a potent inhibitor of angiogenesis, an early and critical event in the development of hypertension. F-50K was delivered through the human heart by direct injection of a recombinant adeno-associated virus serotype 2 vector (AAV2-F-50K) into spontaneously hypertensive rats (SHR) at the age of 6 weeks. The blood pressure, weight, and the heart and aortic wet weight were measured. The F-50K gene therapy significantly decreased the blood pressure, suppressed the heart and aorta growth, and attenuated cardiac hypertrophy in SHR (P That's What I Like About The 90s: Women Popping It To Boys In The '90s For as long as I can remember, my parents have told me how they met in the '80s. Well, that and how when they were younger, they tried to sneak into Jimmy Buffett concerts. But my story is kinda long, so I'll keep it brief. When I was about 8 years old, my dad had a side job working at the local gas station. And one night a guy who worked in there kinda came up to him and told him that he didn't get along with his old friend, and since my dad was new, he could kinda "take him under his wing." The man said he could show me stuff his old buddy didn't know about. We had this little deal where I'd show the guy some things, then he would teach me some stuff. The guy's name was Cody, 6d1f23a050
