Download Tbarcode Office V10.3.1 KeygenQ: Setting up rails development environment When you use the command bundle install It creates the directory /workspace/rails/myapp in the root directory of your project, and then runs bundle exec rake db:create db:migrate db:setup db:test:prepare I'd like to know how to set up a rails project so that whenever I cd into /workspace/rails/myapp (the same directory as the directory created by bundle install, which will always be the root directory of my project) I do not need to execute these commands. For example, is there a way to have a rails project that is inside another rails project? When I change directories into /workspace/rails/myapp, it seems to create a new project instead of the old one. A c6a93da74d
